Detailed Reviewer's Report

The paper provides a detailed and well-structured analysis of consumer rights protection for imported goods in Vietnam, effectively combining legal provisions, international practices, and practical challenges in the context of cross-border e-commerce. It clearly identifies gaps in enforcement, quality control, liability, and inter-agency coordination while offering thoughtful solutions, including legal synchronization, enhanced state management, consumer education, and the role of social organizations. The inclusion of comparative perspectives and multi-stakeholder approaches strengthens the paper's depth and relevance. However, the paper could be improved by simplifying language and reducing repetition to make the arguments clearer and more accessible to readers.
