Reviewer Name: Dr. Zainuddin,

Reviewer's Comment for Publication.

This manuscript explores an important theme related to the management of children's property from a fiqh perspective, particularly the role of wali (guardian) and wasi (trustee) in the tasarruf of a child's assets. The topic is relevant and contributes significantly to contemporary fiqh studies, especially in relation to child protection, property law, and shar'i authority in asset management. The manuscript is written clearly and systematically, and it utilizes credible primary and secondary sources.

Detailed Reviewer's Report

A. Introduction

- Add an explicit research gap in the introduction.
- Present the research objectives in bullet points to enhance clarity.

B. Methods

- Explain the content analysis approach in a more systematic manner.
- Provide a more detailed description of:
 - how the content analysis procedures were conducted,
 - the criteria used in selecting the sources,
 - how the analysis was carried out systematically.
- Include methodological references (e.g., Krippendorff, Mayring, or classical Islamic content analysis methodology).
- Present an analytical framework (such as an usul fiqh approach, comparative madhhab analysis, or normative analysis).
- Strengthen the linkage between the findings and the chosen methodology.

REVIEWER'S REPORT

C. Discussion

- Strengthen the connection between the analytical results and contemporary realities (e.g., modern family law).
- Provide practical policy implications (policy recommendations).
- Incorporate the relationship with maqasid al-shariah (protection of wealth, life, and lineage).

D. Conclusion

- Add practical implications and directions for future research.
- Clarify how the findings contribute to the field of contemporary Islamic jurisprudence.

E. References:

The references in the manuscript are still dominated by classical and older sources, and therefore do not yet reflect the development of recent research. It is recommended to:

- Add 8–10 recent references (2018–2025).
- Integrate contemporary studies on child protection, modern family law, and the management of children's property within the Islamic legal system.
- Include modern maqasid al-shariah literature and recent legal studies to strengthen academic relevance.
- Revise and standardize the citation style in accordance with the journal's guidelines.
