Detailed Reviewer's Report

The manuscript “Le Capital Débrouillardise : Extension de la RBV aux Contextes de Rareté” presents a strong and original contribution to entrepreneurship and strategic management literature by proposing a contextual extension of the Resource-Based View through the concept of capital débrouillardise, supported by a rigorous mixed-methods design combining qualitative insights and quantitative validation in the Burkinabè context; the theoretical framing is well-grounded, hypotheses are logically derived, and the empirical analysis is robust and appropriate, offering convincing evidence of the compensatory and complementary role of informal, relational, and creative resources in entrepreneurial survival under conditions of structural scarcity; however, the paper would benefit from minor improvements, including clearer presentation of some tables and figures, slight tightening of lengthy sections to enhance readability, and careful verification of reliability statistics and formatting consistency; overall, the study is methodologically sound, conceptually innovative, and highly relevant for research on entrepreneurship in emerging economies, and is recommended for acceptance with minor revisions.
