Reviewer's Comment for Publication.

This case report describes a 56-year-old immunocompetent male who developed necrotizing fasciitis following trivial roadside trauma. The case highlights the importance of early clinical suspicion, rapid progression of disease, and the role of prompt surgical debridement combined with broad-spectrum antibiotics in improving outcomes.

Strength:

1. Clinically important and educational case.
2. Well-structured discussion with updated references.
3. Good explanation of diagnosis, LRINEC score relevance, and management principles.
4. Clear emphasis on early surgical intervention and multidisciplinary care.

Weakness:

1. Language and grammar need editing.
2. Some repetition in discussion and conclusion sections.
3. Minor formatting inconsistencies.

Overall assessment:

This is an important and informative case report. It clearly shows how a small injury can lead to a serious condition if not recognized early. Minor revisions are needed for language polishing and formatting consistency. Overall, it is suitable for publication after minor revision.

Recommendation: Manuscript accepted for publication after minor revision.
