

Manuscript Withdrawal Form

After your article is withdrawn, it will be removed from the journal's official database in both PDF and HTML formats. Please note that this journal follows an open access policy, which allows anyone to freely download and use published articles for academic purposes. Because of this open access nature, once an article is published, it may be stored or shared on various third-party repositories and platforms such as Scribd, Google Scholar, Turnitin, Academia.edu, My Science Work, Index Copernicus, and others. Therefore, the journal and its publisher will not be held responsible for the presence or continued availability of the withdrawn article on any external repositories or websites beyond the journal's own database.

Note: This form must be submitted by the corresponding author using the same email address that was used at the time of manuscript submission.
